

On November 2, 2010

Make your vote a work of art!

With our Governor's and many of our State legislators' seats up for election, you have the opportunity to educate candidates on how best to support the strength and vitality of the arts and culture sector.

Not only does the cultural sector directly provide the region with 14,000 jobs and $562 million in direct spending, it is also the number one reason that Philadelphia is an "excellent" place to live according to a recent Keystone poll, drawing tens of thousands of visitors to the area.

Additionally, cities that thrive are actively utilizing their cultural sectors in tackling broader civic issues.

Arts and culture should be part of any candidate's platform for making the region greater.

So as a patron of the arts, please remember to vote on November 2.

To learn more about where the candidates stand, please visit www.philaculture.org

On November 2, 2010

Make your vote a work of art!

With our Governor's and many of our State legislators' seats up for election, you have the opportunity to educate candidates on how best to support the strength and vitality of the arts and culture sector.

Not only does the cultural sector directly provide the region with 14,000 jobs and $562 million in direct spending, it is also the number one reason that Philadelphia is an "excellent" place to live according to a recent Keystone poll, drawing tens of thousands of visitors to the area.

Additionally cities that thrive are actively utilizing their cultural sectors in tackling broader civic issues.

Arts and culture should be part of any candidate's platform for making the region greater.

So as a patron of the arts, please remember to vote on November 2.

To learn more about where the candidates stand, please visit www.philaculture.org